The Act requires that a person entering into a contract for commercial gain for providing information about a crime s/he has committed, or the other party to the contract, must report the contract to the Attorney General. The Attorney General may apply for a court order that any money or property agreed to in the contract be paid or provided to the Attorney General, or if already transferred under the contract, that the court make an order that it be forfeited to the Attorney General. The proceeds will then be placed into a fund to reimburse the victims of that offence, or to assist victims of crime in general.
