Nova Scotia	Identification of Criminals Act , S.N.S. 2011, c.37 (unproclaimed amendments to Change of Name Act , R.S.N.S 1989, c.66) Requires a person who wants to change their name to be fingerprinted and undergo a criminal records check. If a criminal record is found during the process, the new name will be linked to the old name by the RCMP and the national criminal records database. This would prevent people with a criminal record from hiding their past by changing their name.

PROVINCE/TERRITORY	LEGISLATION
	Under the Change of Name Act , the Registrar General, before registering or refusing a change of name request, has a duty to ask the Ministry of Community Safety and Correctional Services (MCSCS) if MCSCS has any information about the person requesting a change of name that would be included in a police records check and MCSCS shall so advise the Registrar General. Also, the Act allows the Registrar General, on request from MCSCS, to provide MCSCS with any information in the Registrar General's possession or control that may be relevant in determining whether there has been a change of name of a person for law enforcement and corrections purposes. The Registrar General may give MCSCS access to any or all records to allow MCSCS to obtain information on the particular person.
